Boaters & Fishermen, Lake Erie Lovers....

Tired of :

- Will there be algae? Where is the algae?
- Don't let the dog in the algae water? Don't want to fish in green water?
- Don't want to swim in green water?
- Don't want to get sick from contact with & breathing green water algae air?

Promises made not kept. Federal and state governments spent billions of dollars - yet we haven't gotten a clean lake.

- Large-scale industrial operations (that are too massive to be called farms) now raise hundreds of thousands of cattle each year in the Western Lake Erie and all the untreated manure is land applied close to barns.
- These animal factories manure came in the late 1990's which is when Lake Erie started turning green making manure the change that is responsible for too much phosphorus as the key source of harmful algae.
- Government has bowed to the world's largest meat and dairy companies, the Farm Bureau and other pro-agriculture lobbying groups who have developed no meaningful strategy to regulate or mediate the manure pollution problem.
- The result is that the lake is back to its former status of toxic green algae that is the only source of drinking water to more than a million people.

- We must demand relevant action to control industrial meat and dairy operations manure runoff (often owned by overseas companies)
